PUBLIC MUST BURN SOFT OR FINE COAL

Domestic Size Anthracite Supply for City to Be Inadequate.

CALLS ARE DOUBLED

Complaints Mostly Due to Unwillingness to Use Substitutes.

NO NEED TO GO HEATLESS

Fuel Officials Plead for More Cooperation on Part of Consumer.

The coming of colder weather has emphasized acutely not exactly the shortage of fuel, but the inadequate supply of the domestic sizes of anthracite such as stove and egg. This is a distinction with a difference.

George J. Elitz, Deputy Fuel Administrator for Manhattan, said yesterday that in the last three days of real wintry weather there have come to his office twice as many calls for coal as usual. "But complaints in the main," he added, "come from persons who cannot get the particular size of coal they want and are accustomed to use."

The New York public in general, Mr. Elitz said, has not done much yet by way of serious cooperation with the Fuel Administration in a willingness to use substitutes for what are commonly known as the domestic sizes of anthracite. In the metropolitan district plenty of bituminous coal and also plenty of the smallest or steam making sizes of anthracite are available. These are used largely for industrial purposes, but they are excellent for domestic use in the banking of fires or for a top dressing over a layer of the larger size coal.

No Need to Lack Heat.

"There is not and will not be enough anthracite of the so-called domestic sizes to meet the demand," Mr. Elitz said, "the shortage being about 30 to 40 per cent. But there is no need for anybody to be without heat. With a little care and attention, bituminous and buckwheat size anthracite will give excellent results."

Unless storms should tie up transportation, heavier shipments of domestic sizes of anthracite are expected in the metropolitan district directly after November 30, when the Great Lakes shipments, which vary from 2,000,000 to 5,000,000 tons a year, close for the season. Even with this partial prospective relief, however, William H. Woodin, State Fuel Administrator, pointed out yesterday, there is bound to be a material shortage of domestic anthracite right through the winter, and consumers sooner or later will have to realize the necessity of resorting to the expedients recommended.

As in Manhattan, the office of the Bronx deputy administrator, Alexander J. Fraser, has been rushed with applicants demanding the domestic sizes of anthracite. "Bronx consumers," said Mr. Fraser, "apparently have not yet taken this fuel shortage seriously. After carefully explaining to a complainant that buckwheat will do very nicely and after giving him instructions for the use of bituminous, I find he usually replies, 'Yes, I know, but won't you please get me some stove coal?'"

Residents of the lower end of Staten Island complained yesterday that the State Fuel Administration refuses to co-operate with local coal dealers in Perth Amboy, N. J., from whom the Staten Island residents have been getting their coal by having it ferried across the Kills in one-ton lots. When the dealers were notified by the Fuel Administration that hereafter they must ferry their own coal to Staten Island they refused to accept further orders from Staten Island consumers.

TO PROBE GIN SUBSTITUTION.

U. S. Officers Believe 300 Cases Were Changed at Sea.

Federal authorities will begin a thorough investigation to-morrow into the substitution of water in a shipment of 200 cases of gin from Holland to McKesson & Robbins, wholesale druggists. The substitution is believed to have been made at sea.

The gin was stored in a Brooklyn bonded warehouse after being unloaded at the Bush Terminal docks, and not in the Independent Warehouse, 415 Greenwich street, as previously announced by Gus J. Simons, chief State enforcement officer.

HIS 200 POUND WIFE GONE WITH $3,000 LIFE SAVINGS

Woman Goes Out to Buy Tobacco for Husband and Never Returns—He Finds Safe Deposit Vault Empty, Except for Pawn Tickets.

Salvatore Dittatore of 169 Hester street, who owns several fruit and vegetable stands on the lower East Side, reported last night to Detective Morgan Callahan of the Bureau of Missing Persons that his wife, Jennie, who is 38 and weighs 200 pounds, had disappeared and that he had discovered also the loss of his life savings—$3,000 in cash and jewels.

It was sixteen years ago last August, so Dittatore told the detective, that he went one night to a street fair in Naples, where everybody was in fancy costume, and there he saw Jennie for the first time and was in love with her as soon as he saw her. She was selling cakes from a basket. Soon they were married, and ten years ago they came to New York. He started a fruit stand at Hester and Mott streets, and made money.

"I was very happy with Jennie," Dittatore told the detective. "You ask me to describe her? She weighs 200 pounds, more, it is true, than when I met her that night in Naples, but she is beautiful just the same. She is about five feet five, and has gray eyes, and a big pile of hair on her head the color of chestnuts. You can't miss her. We had no children, but we were happy."

"Last Sunday," continued Dittatore, "she said she would go out and buy me some tobacco."

"I waited for the tobacco, but she never came back. Late that night I found that she had taken many of her dresses."

"And a day or two later I went to the Bowers Bank, where in the first few years in New York, I had put all my savings. I had not been there three years. And then I realized that in those three years she had asked for many dresses and much jewelry, so that there were no savings to put there. In the safe deposit box I found no cash and no jewels—only a bunch of pawn tickets."

"These tickets told me that in February, 1920, she had started pawning the jewelry that we had laid aside for our old age. She pawned the earrings for $50, a diamond ring for $50, a little bracelet—all the stuff I had bought. There were $2,500 in jewels and $700 in cash."

Dittatore told Detective Callahan that he did not believe his wife had been kidnapped, and that he could not believe another man was concerned in her disappearance.

CANAL STREET CHURCH HAS 75TH ANNIVERSARY

Archbishop Hayes to Be at St. Alphonsus's To-day.

The seventy-fifth anniversary of the dedication of St. Alphonsus's Roman Catholic Church, now at West Broadway and Canal street, will be celebrated to-day with a solemn pontifical mass, at which Archbishop Hayes will preside. The celebration will continue until Tuesday night, closing with a dinner and reception. The reunion mass for deceased priests and parishioners will take place to-morrow morning. Tuesday morning the mass will be for the children of the parish.

St. Alphonsus's, now under the rectorship of the Rev. Francis Gallagher, C. S. R., who was born in the parish and succeeded the Rev. John Toohy as rector, is named after the founder of the Redemptorist Order, who thus became the patron saint of the church. It is an offspring of the parish of the Most Holy Redeemer in Third street, the rector of the latter having established St. Alphonsus's for Roman Catholics living "downtown."

GERMAN LAW REQUIRES WHISKY FOR LIFEBOATS

But American Ships Do Not Permit Temptation.

Germany has passed a new law making it compulsory for all vessels clearing from German ports to carry a quart of whisky for each lifeboat, according to Thomas H. Rosbottom, general manager of the United States Line.

The George Washington is the first American vessel to be affected by the new law, said Mr. Rosbottom. She complied with the German law and on her last arrival at Hoboken carried the required amount of liquor.

The liquor is not carried in the lifeboats," explained Mr. Rosbottom. "It is under lock and key, the officers appreciating the fact that if it were left in the lifeboats it would be stolen by the first class passengers before the vessel was one day out at sea."

MRS. SARGEANT'S WILL PROVIDES FOR KINSMEN

Bequest of $5,000 and Salary Made to Servant.

The will of Mrs. Adeline Pell Sargeant, who died November 13 at her home, 61 West Fifth street, was filed for probate yesterday. She made bequests of $5,000 each to a nephew, Harry B. Sargeant of White Plains; his son, Harry B. Jr.; Isabel M. Lawrence, a niece, of Newark, and Horace Brewington, a servant, who is to get $60 monthly during his life. A bequest of $1,000 is made to Mrs. Margaret Smith of 144 West Seventy-sixth street.

The residue goes to Eleanor Armstrong Lytle, a grandniece, of Waterbury, Conn., the executrix, with instructions to expend such sums as are necessary to keep Mrs. Sargeant's brother, Ogden P. Pell, "comfortable in every way," in the Episcopal Home, Amsterdam avenue and 111th street.

TWO POLICEMEN SEIZED WHEN THIRD ENDS FIGHT

Candidate for Force Also Arrested but Is Released.

Two policemen and one man awaiting appointment to the police force were arrested early yesterday in a chop suey restaurant at 5208 Fifth avenue, Brooklyn, by Patrolman Charles Corbett of the Fourth avenue station, who ran into the restaurant when he heard sounds of fighting. He arrested Walter Harrington of 67 Bond street, Brooklyn, of the Astoria precinct; Charles Casazza of 5605 Seventh avenue, Brooklyn, of the Hamilton avenue station, and William De Mint of 55 Pioneer street, Brooklyn. Harrington charged that Casazza had struck him over the head with a black jack. Magistrate Dale in Fifth Avenue Court held Casazza in $500 bail on a charge of felonious assault and both Harrington and Casazza were paroled until Friday on charges of disorderly conduct. Both were suspended by Deputy Commissioner Leach. De Mint was released.

WETS ASK LIGHT ON DRY LAW'S FAILURE

Leaders Praise Harding for Making Known Truth About Prohibition.

WARNING OF SCANDAL

Hill Renews Effort to Put Enforcement Up to Daugherty.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.
New York Herald Bureau.
Washington, D. C., Nov. 25.

Wet leaders in Congress are praising the President for making known the true situation in the country with regard to enforcement of the prohibition law. The President has accomplished, they say, what many members of Congress have been endeavoring to do with only indifferent success because of the claims and denials of Prohibition Commissioner Haynes and others.

Representative Tinkham (Mass.) said today: "It has been patent for many months to all those who gave attention to the situation that enforcement was a failure and the flamboyant claims of the dry organization were not to be taken seriously. If an immediate change is not brought about the situation will become a national scandal."

Wet leaders are elated and much encouraged. They say serious Cabinet discussion of the situation fully justifies the efforts they are to make to reveal true conditions. They want the country informed of the full extent of alleged corruption and mismanagement of every character in prohibition enforcement.

Representative John Philip Hill (Md.) renewed his efforts to have prohibition enforcement placed under the Department of Justice. He sent a letter to Representative Volstead (Minn.), Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, in which he requested that the committee hold a hearing on December 12 on his bill providing for the transfer. Mr. Hill called attention to the opposition of Wayne B. Wheeler and the Anti-Saloon League to this legislation and added that it now has become obvious that attempted enforcement is futile under present conditions.

Cooperation between Federal officials and State authorities in the enforcement of criminal laws, including violations of the Volstead act, the Dyer act, the narcotic act and postal frauds act has been advanced through a system of conferences recently arranged between United States Attorneys and State prohibition attorneys. Attorney-General Daugherty announced to-day.

The cases arising under these laws have placed a tremendous load upon the division during the fiscal year, he said.

More than 60,000 new cases were begun during the year included in the report and 53,156 were terminated. Recent legislation providing for additional trial judges will prove helpful, the Attorney-General says.

TAKES CHILD FROM DIVORCEE

Justice Tierney, in the Bronx Supreme Court, yesterday signed an order taking George S. Earl, 8 years old, out of the custody of Mrs. Mary Sargeant, his maternal grandmother, and putting him in the care of his paternal grandfather, George S. Earl of 416 Third avenue, Brooklyn. Justice Tierney said he was influenced in his decision by information that Mrs. Sargeant had been divorced and remarried. The fight for custody of the boy, whose parents are dead, was started in Queens county last July.
